A Westport man who claims he shot two women in self-defense a week before Christmas is now charged with the sisters' murder.

An Oldham County grand jury handed up an indictment for Ronald T. "Ronnie" Evridge on May 3.

Evridge, 57, had been on the run from local authorities. He was arrested early Friday morning.

Evridge now faces two murder charges and one charge of tampering with physical evidence in the deaths of his girlfriend, Sandy Allen, 24, and her sister, Heather Faulkerson, 21.

With seven Republican candidates vying for the 4th Congressional District seat, the primary election May 22 is as important as the fall general election.

Only two Democrats are running for the congressional post currently held by Rep. Geoff Davis, Williamstown attorney Bill Adkins and Corinth businessman Greg Frank.

The crowded Republican field includes two Oldham County residents, Brian Oerther and Walt Schumm.

Local kindergartners catch Derby spirit

Goshen Elementary School hosted its annual kindergarten derby May 3. Students, along with parents and teachers, cheered as the kindergartners made a lap around the track wearing handcrafted jockey silks made of construction paper. Right, a bugler played "Call to the Post" before every heat.

The kindergarten derby is an annual tradition for veteran kindergarten teacher Sharon Pittenger. Pittenger, known fondly as "Mrs. P," has taught kindergarten for 49 years.

Club withdraws land donation for park, library

BY TRACY HARRIS
STAFF WRITER, THE OLDHAM ERA

A plan to donate land for a new Goshen park and library by the North Oldham Lions Club has unravelled after dissension amongst the club's leadership.

Following a board meeting Monday, club president Carol Hublar said the offer is being withdrawn.

Since December, club board members have disagreed on specifics for donating the 24-acre park currently owned by the club on U.S. 42.

The land is part of a park donated to the NOLC in 1971 by Edith Belknap in honor of her husband, William.

A proposal submitted by the club in July 2011 would have given six acres to the library and the rest to the county to use as a passive park. The NOLC

Teacher admits to having sex with students

BY LISA KING
LANDMARK NEWS SERVICE

A former high school teacher and La Grange resident arrested last summer for sexual abuse involving students is unlikely to serve jail time.

Shannon Hirschert, a special needs teacher at Shelbyville's Martha Layne Collins High School in 2010-11, pleaded guilty Monday to six counts of first-degree sexual abuse and distribution of obscene matter.

Hirschert, 43, reached a plea agreement with Shelby County prosecutors.

The agreement recommends probation of a seven-year sentence, although Judge Charles Hickman will announce his decision whether to accept or deny the agreement when she is sentenced June 18.

Prosecutors have recommended five years each for the first five counts of the sexual abuse charges, the maximum sentence for a

PSC approves sale of Dynegy's Buckner plan to LG&E

The Kentucky Public Service Commission today approved a proposal by Kentucky Utilities Co. and Louisville Gas & Electric Co. to construct a natural gas-fired generating facility at LG&E's Cane Run plant in Jefferson County and to purchase an existing natural gas-fired plant in Oldham County.

KU and LG&E plan to construct a 640-mega-watt combined cycle generating plant at Cane Run. Combined cycle plants are designed to operate most of the time.

The companies also will purchase the 495-megawatt Bluegrass Generation simple cycle power plant in La Grange.

The plant, built by Dynegy, is located on Commerce Parkway near Ky. 393 and is designed to run only at times of peak demand.

In their application, KU and LG&E said the additional generating capacity is needed to replace coal-fired units at Cane Run and at KU's Green River plant in Muhlenberg County and Tyrone plant in Woodford County and to meet projected increases in demand for electricity by 2016.

Construction of the new plant at Cane Run will cost about $583 million, including a new natural gas pipeline to the site.

The purchase price of the Bluegrass Generation plant is $110 million.

Saving Minutes registry offered to help those in need more quickly

The Oldham County Health Department and the Oldham County Emergency Management announced the release of a new program designed for individuals who have special needs during disasters.

The database, called Saving Minutes, is a secure web-based registry for anyone who might require special assistance or individual care during an emergency.

The database asks for information such as name, address, emergency phone numbers and special needs of anyone living in the home.

Having this information before a disaster strikes will save valuable time by first responders and emergency planners during the response. It also creates a database of the special needs population, thus increasing effective planning to protect them.

Special needs individuals include those who would need help during disasters due to mental or physical impairments such as the home-bound, oxygen dependency, those who require mobility aids, hearing or vision impaired, developmentally disabled or anyone who has a condition that would make it difficult or impossible for them to evacuate their homes or live in a shelter without assistance.

To register for the Saving Minutes program, visit www.oldhamcountky.gov. Applications are also available from the Oldham County Health Department. Call 222-3516 ext. 135 for information.

Local cancer survivors selected for parade at the Kentucky Oaks

BY TRACY HARRIS
STAFF WRITER, THE OLDHAM ERA

The crowd roared as a parade started down the track at Churchill Downs Friday. But this time, it wasn't a parade of horses, but a parade of survivors.

The fourth annual Survivors Parade honored 138 cancer survivors clad in pink from around the Louisville area just before the Kentucky Oaks race.

The women, many alongside a family member, walked from the backside of the track to the paddock.

Over the past three years, Oaks Day celebrations have become a time to honor women, especially those with breast cancer.

But this year, Churchill Downs officials expanded the event's reach and partnered with Stand Up To Cancer, an organization that awards grants to groups of scientists to develop new cancer treatments and for groundbreaking high-risk research projects.

"Kentucky Oaks Day is all about the ladies," Churchill Downs President Kevin Flanery said. "When our female fans told us that cancer affects their lives in many different ways, we listened and responded with an opportunity for all of our fans to get involved in supporting the research and prevention efforts of the many types of cancers that need our attention."

The parade continues to honor female cancer survivors — nominations are submitted about why each woman is an inspiration and should represent other survivors.

Of those nominees, 138 women were selected — one for each year of the Oaks' running.

Oldham County residents Karen Black, Lyndsey Meredith, Micki Hudnall, Tina Frey, Phyllis Lee and Kim Nuss all participated in this year's event.

Honorees received two tickets to the Kentucky Oaks and a special luncheon.

Lee said despite having to evacuate and delay because of storms, she enjoyed the experience.

"It's great being with a group of women who have been through the same thing," she said. "It's emotional but it's also inspirational."

Lee said officials did a great job making the women feel like it was a special day.

She brought Angie Shelby with her, a friend who Lee said was her "shoulder" throughout her treatment.

"I had a great time — it was an amazing feeling," she said.

Apple Patch clients and staff celebrate after the organization's annual boat race May 4.

APPLE PATCH HOSTS BOAT RACE

A local non-profit celebrated Derby week with its own unique twist Thursday.

Apple Patch, a Crestwood-based organization, hosted its second-annual boat race for employees and clients the day before the Kentucky Derby Festival's Great Steamboat Race.

Apple Patch promotes independence for adults with intellectual and developmental disabilities.

More than 100 clients attended the event, which paired a team of three employees with three clients to complete a relay-style obstacle course.

Each of the organization's departments formed a team and created a boat of various materials — and gave them names.

The boat "Bust ACAP" came from the Autism Center Apple Patch, "Hakuna Matata" from the residential program and "Blue-R-Budget" from the APEX program.

The obstacle course included two hula-hoop stations, a silly string zone and a ball toss.

Employees faced additional challenges, like kicking a balloon along the course or running with a basketball between their knees.

Despite the heat, participants enjoyed the event, cheering loudly and urging each other on.

Dreams With Wings, a similar organization based in Louisville, also fielded a team for this year's event.

Awards were given for the three fastest teams and the team with the most crowd support.

Newport and Fort Thomas.

Other Republican candidates for the seat include Sparta attorney Marc Carey, Lewis County Judge-Executive Thomas Massie, Boone County Judge-Executive Gary Moore, state Rep. Alecia Webb-Edgington and Kenton County consultant Tom Wurtz.

The Republican candidates agree on most issues: smaller government, fewer taxes and repealing the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act, often called “Obamacare.”

Because of their policy similarities, candidates are relying on personal experiences to sway voters.

Oldham representation

Four of the candidates are from the Northern Kentucky area, but Schumm believes it is time to even the distribution of federal funding to the district.

He said over the past decade, Boone, Kenton and Campbell counties have received an average of 62 percent more federal funding per capita than Oldham County.

“That’s $25.3 billion (compared to) $2.3 billion in the same period,” he said.

Schumm is a builder/developer and serves on the Oldham County Board of Education. Schumm points to local infrastructure as an area in need of federal funding.

“We looked for federal help to develop a new interchange that would directly serve Oldham Reserve and thus far we’ve been denied help,” he said.

In addition to a proposed exit at mile marker 20 on I-71, Schumm said funding is needed to widen I-71 from downtown Louisville at least to Warsaw, if not all the way to I-75.

Moore agrees with Schumm on widening I-71, something he said he’s supported as judge-executive.

Moore said he would also like to see an exit added at mile marker 20 to open access to Oldham Reserve.

“This can be a significant driver of economic development,” he said. “The entire fourth district is uniquely positioned to become an economic Wurtz said he plans to host monthly town hall meetings in each county if elected, and will send a weekly email update.

“My mission is not to bring home the goodies for any specific county in the 4th district,” he said. “My mission is to return the federal government back into its constitutional box.”

Elected experience

Of the candidates, only Webb-Edgington has legislative experience.

The former state police trooper and director of the Kentucky Office of Homeland Security has served in the state house of representatives since 2008.

Webb-Edgington said she has never voted for tax increases while a representative.

Massie and Moore are both elected judge-executives, in Lewis and Boone counties respectively.

Massie took office in 2010 and said he eliminated enough wasteful government spending in the first nine months to pay his salary for three years.

Moore was elected as judge-executive in 1998. He believes bringing his business experience to county government has helped Boone County become one of the fastest-growing counties in the state.

Schumm is serving his third term on the school board, including two uncontested elections.

Oerther has not held a public office before but did run for La Grange mayor in 2010, finishing third. He was a latecomer in the mayoral race after considering a campaign for U.S. Senate.

Oerther is a math teacher at Kennedy Metropolitan Middle School in Louisville.

Carey is an attorney and political commentator who maintains a political blog.

Wurtz is the author of three books and publishes political commentary on his website three times a week. He owns a business consulting firm that specializes in leadership skills.

Democratic candidates

Adkins, an attorney, believes America’s middle class needs more support, including supporting Social Security and Medicare. He also supports the Second Amendment and reducing dependence on foreign oil.

Adkins said he is a political outsider and resides in the center of the 4th District.

“There is no one area of the district that I value over the other.”

He believes the 4th Congressional District, including Oldham County, has been ignored by representatives in Washington.

Adkins said Oldham County has its share of challenges with respect to infrastructure and public services.

“I will listen and work with the community leaders so that I may be a strong voice for them in Washington,” he said.

The other Democratic candidate, Frank, has worked in the medical field.

He has served as a medic for three years with the Kentucky Medical Command Unit in Lexington.

Frank served in the U.S. Army during Operation Desert Storm with the Kentucky National Guard.

tificate in another state. She is also required to register as a sex offender with the Kentucky State Police for the next 20 years, effective when she is sentenced next month.

Hirschert’s attorney, Brian Butler of Louisville, told The Sentinel-News that Hirschert will have to be on the sex offender registry for 20 years.

Hirschert is eager to put the past behind her.

“This has been extremely difficult for her and her family,” Butler said. “But from day one, she acknowledged what she had done, and has been actively involved in counseling and is just trying to move on with her life.”

Hirschert was arrested in August 2011 and charged with six counts of first-degree sexual abuse and two counts of distributing obscene matter to minors dating back to fall 2010.

Shelby County Sheriff’s Det. Jason Rice said when Hirschert, a La Grange resident, was arrested, investigators believed the sexual conduct was consensual, but it fell under KRS statute 510.110, the charge of sexual abuse when a person is in a position of authority or special trust, which includes teachers.

According to court records, Hirschert had sexual contact with two 17-year-olds and she shared revealing photos of herself with them via cell phone at least twice.

A first-year teacher at Collins High School, Hirschert was hired by Shelby County Schools in 2010 after teaching at East Oldham Middle.

Investigators say each of the six charges occurred in different locations in Shelby County, including private property and one incident inside Collins High School.

School officials learned of Hirschert’s behavior after a teacher overheard two students at Collins High School talking about Hirschert. Superintendent James Neihof reported the allegations to law enforcement.

School officials provided investigators with the names of students allegedly involved. While speaking with police, one student disclosed that he had a sexual relationship with Hirschert. The student said it started with friendly text messages between the two, and the messages grew sexual in nature. Then, a sexual relationship developed.

According to court documents, Hirschert confirmed the student’s information and supplied details about other students she had sexual contact and to whom she had sent nude photos of herself by phone.

Hirschert was put on administrative leave when she was arrested Aug. 3, pending the outcome of the investigation, but she resigned two days later.

membership voted to move forward with the donation.

Both fiscal court and the library's board of trustees voted to accept the proposal in December.

The proposal included a stipulation for Oldham County Parks and Recreation to maintain the 15.1 acres as a passive park with "no development for buildings, ball fields, soccer, light towers or parking lots other than those currently in existence."

Following July's proposal, library officials spent more than $5,000 on land surveys so new deeds could be prepared. Deed first drafts were completed in early January.

But soon after the proposal was accepted, several club board members raised objections to its own parameters.

Revisions — including halving the library's allotment — were approved by the club's board in January, despite the absence of several members.

During the meeting, two members left to break the quorum, but another member arrived later to re-establish it.

Oldham County Judge-Executive David Voegelé said those proposal revisions would have tied the county's hands in unreasonable ways by prohibiting picnic shelters, playgrounds or bathrooms.

Voegelé said the county agreed to the original stipulations — just the changes made after fiscal court accepted the proposal.

A master planning committee would have developed park plans and included NOLC representatives.

The disagreement split the board into factions, according to former president Joyce Fletcher — members who support the original proposal, those who don't and members who were ambivalent or were trying to mediate the situation.

Fletcher said the disagreement caused her to resign as president — a post she held for five years.

It is a decision she now regrets.

"If I had known how bad it would get, I wouldn't have stepped down," she said.

Fletcher believes the NOLC is reneging on its offer to donate the land, although Hublar maintains the proposal was non-binding.

In a press release written by Hublar, she said differences between the parties could not be resolved.

"The North Oldham Lions Club now needs to return our attention to charitable work," she said.

But maintaining the park uses most of the club's funds and restricts other charitable giving, Fletcher said.

At least $15,000 is spent annually on mowing, electricity, insurance and other maintenance.

"I still think (the donation is) a wonderful idea," Fletcher said. "It is what the community wants and deserves."

Voegelé said he is disappointed the club withdrew the offer — but said he doesn't believe all the club's members are at fault.

"I'm really upset about it," he said. "I just can't begin to understand the leadership."

Fletcher said she believes Hublar and others are losing sight of the club's mission of service.

Annie Johnston, Belknap's granddaughter, agrees that some members are not acting in the community's interest.

"This is not what my family had in mind when we donated the property," she said. "My grandparents would not want what's happening now because it's not for the community."

When the Belknaps donated the property, they wanted to give it to the community, and the NOLC offered to be stewards of the land, Johnston said.

"Now it seems to be a private preserve for some of the lions and that's wrong," she said.

At least one board member has asked Hublar to step down as president.

women in self-defense.

The shooting occurred around 3:30 p.m. Dec. 18, and police arrived to find both women dead and Evridge bleeding from a laceration in his arm.

According to family members, Allen had a 5-year-old child and Faulkerson was pregnant.

The shooting took place in a two-story barn in the 5400 block of 18-Mile Creek Road about five miles outside of La Grange in a rural part of the county.

The barn is on property belonging to Evridge's brother, although according to police, the barn is Ronnie Evridge's residence and is also a known hangout.

Police have been called to the property in the past.

record including multiple drug charges, menacing and domestic violence.

His court record lists 26 pages of charges dating back to 1995 — but most have been dismissed, including a charge of violating an emergency protective order or domestic violence order.

Evridge was court-ordered in the spring of 2011 to not possess firearms and police seized more than 40 guns from the house in March.

The court order and probation came after Evridge's arrest in the spring for menacing, terroristic threatening, harassment and wanton endangerment.

A neighbor called the police after Evridge threatened to shoot the neighbor's Pomeranian.

When police arrived, Evridge made a number of threats and resisted arrest.

Oldham County Police officers used a Taser on Evridge and transported him to a hospital.

Evridge told OCPD officers that he had "guns that can penetrate through five or six (officers) stacked up," and that the officers were lucky he didn't have a gun or he would have shot them.

"I'll make blood run down the streets of La Grange," Evridge said.

Evridge had been on the run recently, and had warrants for other charges, including a probation violation.

Kentucky State Police located him about 2:30 a.m. Friday and he tried to flee from a building in New Castle.

He was arrested in the 1400 block of La Grange Road in Henry County and police recovered multiple weapons and an array of ammunition from the building and from Evridge's vehicle.

He is now housed in the Oldham County Jail.

He was jailed for a different probation violation shortly after the women died at his home.

Evridge spent Christmas weekend in Oldham County jail after violating his probation by associating with one of the victims, Sandy Allen, a known felon who had been convicted of drug possession in earlier in the year.

Evridge was also court-ordered not to possess or purchase any firearms or ammunition during his Evridge called his probation officer, Richard Gray, on Dec. 20 and admitted to shooting both women.

He also told Gray he purchased two handguns, a .44 Magnum and a .22 caliber, about 10 days before the shooting.

Evridge told police his estranged wife, who lives nearby, purchased ammunition for the .44 Magnum.

GOOD SAMARITANS, BAD DOG

THE OLDHAM ERA/JACQUELYN HACK

Meet Blake

Blake ID# D-829

DOB: 6/15/96. When Blake first meets someone, he introduces himself as being just like Abraham Lincoln, because he, too, is tall and thin. Blake sure chose a great alter ego, didn't he? Like the sixteenth president, Blake is also a very good student, and did really well in school last year, making four A's and one B. His favorite subject in school is science. Blake is not sure yet what he'd like to do when he gets older; possibly be a truck driver or a mailman. One of Blake's favorite restaurants is Taco Bell and he also likes pizza. He likes pro football and college basketball, and can speak very knowledgeably about his favorite teams. He likes wrestling, too. He also loves video games and is good at playing them. Blake immediately forms an everlasting bond with everyone he meets. He recently told the judge that he just wanted to make sure he gets a good family, where he will be loved and safe from harm. Can you provide this wonderful young man a loving family to call his own?

Commissioned artist creates tree mural accented by students' handprints

Fifth-grade students at Kenwood Station Elementary in Crestwood recently put the finishing touches on their legacy gift to the school. The tree, painted by artist Heather Montgomery, represents the students' growth during their years at Kenwood Station. Montgomery spent a weekend painting the mural. Her vision became clear as soon as the students began placing their painted hands onto the tree. The students had a great time leaving their "handprint" as a lasting memory of their school years at Kenwood Station.

Sharp, 32, an inmate at the Oldham County Jail, is one of a handful of inmates in the jail's work release program that have been landscaping outside the courthouse and the Fiscal Court Building nearby. ## CENTER HOSTS READING RACE

As the horses raced around the track at Churchill Downs, students raced through books at the Huntington Learning Center in Crestwood. The Huntington Learning Center recently hosted its second annual Reading Race, starting in April.

Students had a month to see how many pages, chapters, and books they could finish. The race culminated with a celebration Tuesday.

The purpose of the Reading Race was and is to inspire children to read, and to see the enjoyment that can be gained by reading.

According to a 2007 reading study conducted by the National Endowment for the Arts, American children are reading less.

The Reading Race is designed to get kids back into the reading saddle. Reading is the key to life-long learning and success.

Among 28 participants, the students read more than 19,000 pages.

Several local businesses got involved in the reading initiative by donating rewards. Participants received gift bags, a book and T-shirts and shared an ice cream cake.

"The Reading Race is a great way to get our students to see that reading can be fun!" said Sarah Rapley, center director of the Huntington Learning Center. "We hope to keep it up for years to come."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

PEDAL-PUSHERS VOTE, TOO

To the editor:

It is distressing to see the article in the May 3 edition, "Take a hike, bikes?"

Would officials consider spending time advocating for better infrastructure for our county before deciding to advocate legislation against the very people who are active in making Oldham County a great place to live?

This is an appeal to Judge-Executive David Voegele and Magistrate Bob Leslie to consider the effects of the legislation you are proposing.

Oldham County has a higher percentage of active, athletic people than most in Kentucky. These active people are the ones who do things like organize events that truly benefit our community... they are also much more likely to vote in the next election.

They pay taxes – lots of 'em – while spending time in activities that don't pollute our air and do promote healthy living.

Seems like these are positive things. Things that our county leaders would want to support

I think the majority of Oldham Countians agree that we need less government and more freedom to enjoy what this great community has to offer.

– not spend time finding ways to kill.

Yes, bicycles inconvenience people in cars and trucks. Yes, we want to promote safety. Yes, the police and road department should be notified before an event that affects traffic. But would you consider that the participants are already paying their fair share of taxes? That our highways are meant for these uses? Two-wheeled vehicles have every right to the road, even if they don't burn gasoline.

Maybe we all need to take a deep breath, slow down a bit, and appreciate the positive side of becoming a bicycle friendly community. This is a good thing! Yes, some bicyclists can be arrogant jerks when they ride down the middle of your lane. Some people are just that way,

It's time to slow down – you're moving too fast

This past week I found myself exhausted and depleted.

I was trying to be all things to all people, staying ahead of every email and voice mail, going to countless meetings, not getting enough sleep or exercise, and wondering why my body was so tired and drained.

My wife simply said, "Slow down you move too fast. Take care of yourself."

She was right on.

So the last two nights I slept eight hours instead of four or five, meditated and spent some time sitting in the back yard with the dogs doing nothing.

People say that modern life has grown so complicated, so busy, so crowded that we have to hurry even to survive. We do not need to accept this idea.

It is quite possible to live in the midst of a highly developed technological society and keep an easy, relaxed pace while doing a lot of hard work. We have a choice. We are not mere victims of our environment, and we don't have to go fast just because everybody else does and urges us to do so.

Often we may not even be aware that we are hurrying. If we have lived that way all our life and been around people who hurry, it is difficult for us to see how fast everything moves.

What can we compare it to? Speed

A mother's pride

Not to brag, but I'm pretty sure my son's a genius — maybe

My 17-year-old son is a genius. I'm not just saying that as a proud mother who can't see the reality of her own offspring.

I have five kids.

Two are going to go far in life because they work hard to reach their goals. Another, hopefully, will at least be able to marry for money.

And another is the reason I am already working on a speech that starts with, "I'm sorry, your honor."

And then there is the aforementioned genius who will coast through life, accomplishing great things without even trying.

The problem is he is also hysterically funny and witty. (And incredibly handsome, but if I say that you'll start to think I'm biased.)

I love people with a sense of humor. I am personally lobbying for all people to gain the right to have one. There is no reason why anyone should be only smart, funny or good-looking (as evidenced by my outstanding son). Although,

GINGER TRUITT

if all the good-looking guys gain a sense of humor, it will be really depressing for the funny guy that the whole class/camp/cheerleading squad loves.

(Don't throw stones. I married that guy!)

So, the reason my son's humor is a bit of a problem is that he wants to be a doctor, but I think he could actually make a living as a stand-up comedian.

This might seem like a low aspiration for a mom to have for her (nearly) perfect son, but in my estimation a good comedian is worth his or her weight in gold.

Life without laughter is not much of a life and I admire those that can pull laughter from even the most difficult audiences. My son has that ability. When he was 9 he asked, "Mom, can I hug you or are your hormones making you crazy?"

Anybody who can make me laugh when I'm PMSing should definitely consider a career in comedy.

I restrained my crazy hormones just long enough to let him hug me without fear of retaliation.

His younger sister was right in line behind him, but one hug per PMS episode is about all I can handle, so I in the nicest voice I could muster I said, "Sorry, kid. Back off!"

Today, my (practically) perfect son is taking his SAT.

Soon, we will discover if he actually retained anything from all those nights he took the encyclopedias to bed, at age 4.

Every morning he would jump up and run into the kitchen, barely able to contain the excitement of his newfound knowledge.

"Mom, do you know what the largest mammal in the world is?"

Only we hadn't started him in speech therapy yet, so it was actually, "Wargest mammo in da werd."

Fortunately, I can speak Dutch, so I was able to say, "No, my precious, amazing, 4-year-old genius, what is the largest mammal in the world?"

"Da bwue wayo!"

Last week, as we were determining which universities should receive what are sure to be his astonishingly high SAT scores, he said, "I checked the requirements for Harvard, so let's go ahead and send them there."

Now, I'm not one to hold my kids back, (unless they are trying to hug me during a crazy hormone time), but Harvard is expensive.

And while my (almost) perfect son has an excellent GPA, scholarships also require extracurricular involvement. And they don't count high scores on video games.

"You probably don't really need a Harvard degree to be a stand-up comedian."

"Mom, you know I want to be a doctor."

whether they are moving forward using pedals or pushing down on the accelerator.

From personal experience, as a bicyclist who tries to make a very small impression when riding, there are plenty of motorists who – if we are considering all facets of the issue of highway safety – should be required to notify the authorities that they are attempting to drive to the grocery store.

Judge-Executive Voegele and members of fiscal court – Will you seriously consider what you are proposing before going further? Gee, a few residents may have had to wait three minutes or so at an intersection to let some bikes go through.

Wouldn't an appeal from you to our residents to be considerate of bicyclists on the road be more appropriate? You may have some people bending your ear about these "pesky bicyclists" but consider the large number of active voters that are riding those bikes before you appease a few squeaky, gas-powered wheels.

I'd like to propose that our county politicians try jumping on bikes and riding to their next campaign fundraiser. You might be surprised at the votes that would generate. I think the majority of Oldham Countians agree that we need less government and more freedom to enjoy what this great community has to offer.

Greenwell is the best candidate for circuit court clerk

To the editor:

You will have an opportunity to vote on May 22 and one local race that will be on the ballot is that of Oldham Circuit Court Clerk. Magistrate Steve Greenwell is running for that position. I have known Steve for many years and had the privilege of working with him in his capacity as magistrate.

Steve not only has a career of the highest ethical standards, but also one of genuine service to this community.

I am proud to say Steve stands for honest and efficient government. Steve's dedication, hard work, keen foresight and business intelligence have prepared him to become the next Oldham Circuit Court Clerk. Please vote May 22.

Rash is the best candidate for circuit court clerk

To the editor:

I would like to recommend Rick Rash for Oldham County Clerk. I have known Rick for a while and found him to be the most honest, hard-working person I have met in county government work.

Rick brings that something extra to everything he does and I know he will bring that same "can-do" spirit to the County Clerk's office. He has promised to bring Thursday night office hours to the North Oldham branch. This is a much needed benefit that no other candidate has promised.

I agree with previous writer Mr. DiGiuro, Rick will not be afraid to take on the "Good Old Boys" in Oldham County to get things done for us. Rick brings a wealth of experience to the position. He has been a successful business owner, creating precious jobs here in the county.

He has been a magistrate and proven himself to be effective at getting things done. He is a people person who looks forward to meeting the friends he hasn't met yet. Please join me in supporting Rick Rash for Oldham County Clerk.

Schumm is the best candidate for 4th district seat

To the editor:

Oldham County resident Walter Christian Schumm — as his name will appear on the ballot — is the outstanding candidate among seven contestants for the Republican nomination for the 4th District Congressional seat. To date, press attention has been paid to the five Northern Kentucky candidate who are all scrambling for the nomination. Meanwhile, our own candidate has gone largely unnoticed until now.

Many of the people in the eastern part of Jefferson County may not know that they have been redistricted out of John Yarmouth's district into Walt's.

We will all be lucky to have him as our representative. There are two principal reasons for the Oldham County community to support Walt:

1. He is an Oldham County candidate and the 4th District has not had a local representative since Gene Snyder. That might seem unimportant, but when competing for scarce federal funds against the powerful Northern Kentucky counties, it is useful to have a Congressman who knows our circumstances and is part of them.

2. Walt's principal advantage is one that cannot be described in a mailer or "push card." He is a man who can bring together disparate parts of an argument, defuse emotional content and reach agreement for the benefit of the community. In my role as judge-executive, I benefitted from Walt's ability to make something happen out of discord.

He is local, qualified and deserves our support on May 22.

Baxter is the best candidate for Commonwealth's Attorney

To the editor:

I am writing in support of the candidacy of Courtney Baxter for Commonwealth's Attorney of the 12th Judicial Circuit. I have known Courtney since she became a felony court prosecutor in Oldham County in 2005. Courtney has been responsible for some of the most serious cases that have occurred in this circuit during that period.

Courtney concentrates primarily on sexual offenses against children and adults. I have always found her to be prepared and fair in her practice of the cases.

While we have frequently found ourselves on the opposite sides of the courtroom, in every instance, the Commonwealth was well-represented and the dispositions were ultimately fair under the law and the facts of the case.

I have watched Courtney try cases to a jury when a negotiated settlement was not possible. She was equally as prepared on those occasions.

In addition, after the untimely death of John Fendley, Courtney agreed to fill the remainder of his unexpired term. John's death left large shoes to fill. Courtney stepped into those shoes and carried on the quality practice that the Oldham County Attorney's office was known for then and remains known for today. Courtney did so at a great personal sacrifice.

It is not often in this circuit that a new Commonwealth Attorney is elected. This election gives residents of this judicial circuit the opportunity to set the tone for the Commonwealth Attorney's Office for many years to come. Courtney will set that tone in a manner in which we can all be proud.

Horse industry falling into the shadows of change

To the editor:

When the dust has settled on this 138th Derby, reality will once again take hold. Like the spires of Churchill Downs slowly sinking into the shadows of change, so goes the way of Kentucky's Thoroughbred industry. The mentality of the once sport of kings has fallen heavily into the industrial groove where a horse is a commodity, a machine to be used and discarded when it has fulfilled its purpose.

There are still some who believe and act otherwise, but their numbers are dwindling with time.

Breeding operations, racing stables, veterinarians and riders are leaving Kentucky in numbers.

Incentives provided by casino gambling as we know have been the culprit. Horses will soon be raised and raced in these other states for these reasons.

But, like the shadow falling over the spires at the Downs, the history of why Kentucky is what it is for horses will not change.

"But, like the shadow falling over the Spires at the Downs, the history of why Kentucky is what it is for horses will not change."

We are the bluegrass, our pastures contain the essentials in fertile soil and natural water that make it possible for the breeding of high quality thoroughbreds.

It is a land of diverse environments that through history has made the thoroughbred horse the remarkable specimen, friend and athlete it is today. Yes, when the dust and shadows settle on all of this, that one fact will still remain a constant.

Kimbell is the best candidate for circuit court clerk

To the editor:

I'm writing to endorse Suzette Kimbell for Oldham circuit court clerk. I've known Suzette since high school and as a practicing attorney, I've had the opportunity to work with her in family court in Oldham County.

Suzette will bring the highest level of professionalism and work-ethic to the circuit clerk's office. She is dedicated to the families of Oldham County and will no doubt serve the community with distinction.

As a former family court judge, I know most people don't think about the circuit clerk's office until they need services. I'm confident that Suzette will make all residents of Oldham County welcome and the office of the circuit clerk accessible to everyone. I hope you will vote for Suzette on May 22.

Fast

becomes a habit we do not know we have.

I'm told that people who live next to freeways no longer hear the cars, and perhaps you have had the same experience around a piece of noisy machinery. Rushing about is very much like that.

Initially, our bodies do the speeding under our conscious direction. We run down the stairs, bolt into rooms, slam doors — it is mainly physical.

But after a while we become habituated to going faster and faster, and speed gradually takes over the mind.

A kind of compulsive pressure builds up. Now we really have a problem, because it is very hard to change such a pattern of living.

Speed-up people can be likened to robots. Perhaps you remember that insightful Charlie Chaplin movie "Modern Times."

Charlie stands at an assembly line in a factory, and for eight hours a day he tightens a nut with his wrench as each piece goes by.

From time to time the boss turns up the pace of the conveyor belt and poor Charlie has to work even faster.

Throughout the day he makes the same movement with his arm. When he comes out after eight hours, he cannot stop.

Though he has no wrench, he makes the same gesture all the way home, to the amazement of the passersby.

This is what happens to stuck-up people. They become automatic, which means they have no freedom and no choices — only compulsions.

Since they take no time to reflect on things, they gradually lose the capacity for reflection.

Without reflection, how can we take charge? We first have to be able to sit back, examine ourselves with detachment and search out our patterns of behavior.

Paradoxically, people who hurry are actually stuck in the same spot.

We need to remember, too, that hurry is contagious.

When a person comes rushing into a room with an agitated mind, it has an impact on the people there.

If they are not very secure themselves, they will become even more agitated by the sight of someone hurrying out of control.

Suppose the whole family is sitting around the breakfast table enjoying their healthy cereal when in bustles the high school senior already late for school.

She calls out to remind her mother to pick up her band uniform from the dry cleaner on the way to the supermarket.

She scrambles about trying to remember where she left her notebook. She spills some milk pouring it on her cereal, which she tries to eat standing up.

In a few minutes, the relaxed atmosphere in the room has dissipated, and everyone becomes edgy.

Happily, the opposite also holds true. When someone at peace and free from hurry enters a room, that person has a calming effect on everyone present.

Such collectedness too is contagious. Until we learn to act in freedom, most of us will be temporarily calmed or agitated by those we are around.

If we want freedom of action, good relations with others, health and vitality, calmness of mind and the ability to grow, we have to learn to slow down.

We simply cannot afford to pay the price of hurry, however attractive the packaging. The price is our very life.

Again the profound words of Henry David Thoreau come to mind: "I have no time to be in a hurry."

Genius

"Yeah, I know, but you have such a talent for comedy! What was that funny thing you said the other day?"

"Which funny thing?"

"The funny thing that made me spew my diet Snapple all over the kitchen."

"That happened three times last week. Maybe you're too easily amused."

"Or maybe you are exceptionally funny and witty! The world deserves to be exposed to your clevernicity!"

"Clevernicity isn't a word, Mom. And I think the world deserves a really great doctor, but if I make less than 2200 on the SAT, I will consider a comedy career instead."

The odds of my (close to) perfect son making less than a 2200 out of 2400 are practically nil. So, I guess we'll be stuck with a doctor in the family.

I hope all those years of video games have developed his hand-eye coordination.

It will come in handy when he's performing surgery on patients who are shaking with laughter at his brilliant jokes.

Or maybe we could compromise and he could become a dentist.

He could easily build his practice with an ad that proclaims, "No laughing gas required!"

TONY COTTEN
Publisher, The Oldham Era

OAKS DAY:
Ask me about my mint julep

Thanks to the endeavors of The Oldham Era’s former Sports Guy Jason Stamm, I received a media badge for the Kentucky Derby.

Media passes are great for most events, minus turtle racing and dry-heave inducing council meetings, and give the bearer a heightened sense of being.

It’s one of the few times we get to think, “Ah, this is for me?” as we jump on a bus or walk into a green room labeled media and scoop up a free lunch and some cold pop.

Media passes allow us to flock among our own, you know, the ones that nobody wants to talk to until they need a ‘favor’ or are concerned what we might print.

It’s great to swap tales with other media folks about the 18-year-old whose name appeared in the arrest records and how the parents tried to get you fired or what official is tracking your every move – yes, we know you’re out there.

More seriously though, in the right hands, with the right focus, media passes give us, the media, a different perspective of an event – or at least an up-close look at an event that we can share with our readers.

I take media passes seriously. They are the one reason I go to any large event as I normally a) cannot afford it, or b) simply don’t care about the event (most of the time it’s the combination of the two).

My media passes to the Derby arrived in a yellow envelope and seemed very official with their laminated facings and use of fonts. I appreciated the clear instructions on the back that told me where and how to park, what floors I could access to (1-3) and the areas I could not (paddock).

I also had a special parking pass to allow me to park close to the field (if you take out the bridge crossing... it was kind of close). I waited throughout the week as local TV news bantered about hat this, hat that, hats on cats, cats in hats and hats... Well, you get it.

Having a year of Kentucky raisin’ under my belt I knew the day of all days to use my pass was Oaks day. The day the locals secretly keep to themselves as the best day to go to the track.

On Friday I hustled out of my office like every good Louisville professional and shouted “I’m off to Oaks!” like Santa Claus calling his reindeer.

Parking in the lot near the red cabooses of Papa John’s Stadium I began the walk to Churchill. I could have caught a bus, but I wanted the full effect. And I received it right away.

Now before you run me out of Kentucky on the next Damn Yankee train to leave the station, let me say that when TV news personalities talk about hats covering heads they should have mentioned more about garments covering things we don’t really need to see.

As a man, I really shouldn’t mind, but I was a bit stunned at times by the “acceptable” code of many dresses. As one religious sign read as I passed down the street, “If it’s not for sale, cover it up.”

Eight words. Yep, that sums it up.

Coming from Indianapolis, where the Indy 500 crowd has more breasts popping out of tank tops than dandelions in a spring yard, I am somewhat calloused by the wildness of people, but I guess I expected more class and less, well, they rhyme.

Sophomore Summer Wheeler led the Lady Colonels by winning both the 400 and 200 meter races.

“I had a good night. I’d still like to break a minute

Analysis: Reinert is a stand-out in the 200 meters, 4x400-

Churchill Downs, I took a deep breath, one that could take in the air of history, the air of being some place hallowed and the air of pushy people in straw hats, plaid pants and penny loafers.

Again, not what I expected. Not bad, but unexpected.

Moving on up to level two I found box seats and a lot of them. Little green cubicles made from iron pipe.

Truth be told, I found the fashion of the pipe's green being more effectual than most of the people dressed at being true to what is the essence of Derby.

The small aisles gave away to close quarter passing. I thought often of the men and women that once passed these aisles 50 years ago or more.

How the average man and woman size was quite a percentage smaller than the beefed up size of our frames today.

I saw vendors with drinks and their shirts said Rocket Man, although there was no rocket.

Drinks were being dispersed in metal box carriers like cigarettes to generations before.

Women sat precariously inside the boxes, men were more likely to be standing than sitting.

Everyone had a drink and there were a lot of smiles amid cigar smoke, sweat and sound.

The Titanic popped in my memory and I matched up the crowd, the steel, the hats, and the people without care like those cruising on the unsinkable ship.

And class.

The lower decks of the titanic were for the working class, the middle for the middle and the higher you rose by deck the more wealth you had.

I was finding class to still be the same as it was at the turn of the 20th century. I went to move up with my media pass in hand.

After studying the elevators for a few minutes, I approached a security guard and asked what was up above. He told me I could go to the third floor, so I did.

And I was kicked off the floor.

Seems my security friend was wrong. But as I took in the air of the third floor I immediately noticed the air conditioning.

This was a movement up in class, so it made sense.

Returning to the second floor I razzed the security guard about getting me kicked off the third floor. He told me to go to the sixth.

And I did.

My media pass allowed me to cruise to the sixth floor where I quickly found the media room. A utopia of fresh meat, gravy, bread, desserts, and pop for free.

And the coldest area of the entire complex filled with TV screens, betting windows, and desks with media names. I searched for The Oldham Era. I found the Wall Street Journal, USA Today, New York Times, but no Era.

Curious, I thought. But I moved on the outdoor area that was next to Millionaire's Row.

I watched a race and sat and thought how great the things are we build up in our minds and just how simple they really are when all is broken down.

I spent most of my time on the sixth floor, enjoying the height of it all, like standing on the bridge of the Titanic.

I was simply perusing Millionaire's Row when a man approached me and asked me what I was doing. I happily told him I am media.

"I can see that. But that pass is no good today."

I was surprised, but not concerned. He explained to me that the sticker necessary for the sixth floor didn't appear on my pass. And in fact, he told me my pass was no good for Oaks Day – it was a media pass for the day prior.

I replied, "Well, now I know."

Puzzled, the man watched as I slowly walked away.

I decided I to call it a day.

The crowd was at peak mass and I wore a wet dress shirt and a heavy sweat-soaked sport coat as I navigated a crowd where alcohol was taking control of boisterous type-A males with cigars and goofy hats.

I had one last stop to make.

I needed to try a Mint Julep.

Handing over $11 for a small checkered glass I sipped the julep.

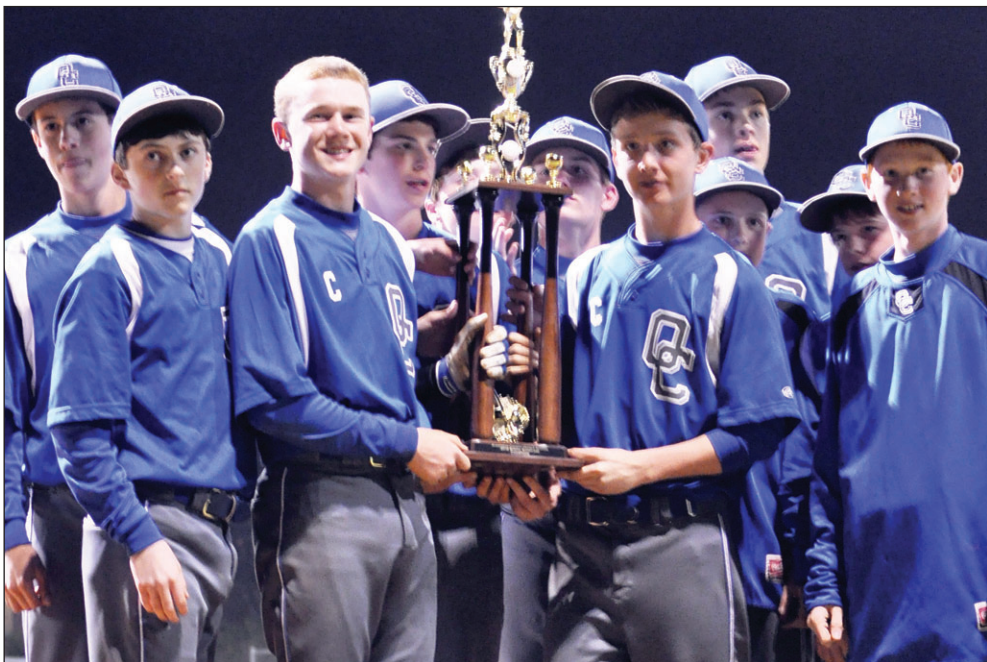

Somewhere between that sip, a walk through a rat trap maze of humans, gates and security, I became angry, sad and hypercritical of my day at the track.

I decided the best I could say was it's all a contradiction of what was, what is, and what can never be again.

To all those wonderful Derby-goers enjoy – my julep I toast to you.

Boys' Sundown Invitational showcases regional talent

BY TONY COTTEN
PUBLISHER, THE OLDHAM ERA

The green and white uniforms of Trinity visited Oldham County May 3 as one of several top teams to compete at the Sundown Invitational.

James Quick, a national high school football standout for Trinity, won the boys 100 meter dash. Quick was not the only standout competing as two of the top ten state hurdlers also competed winning and placing respectively.

However, the athletes of Oldham County Schools showed they had reason to be mentioned among the best as Oldham County placed third and North Oldham fourth behind Trinity (first) and Floyd Central (second) in the team results.

For Oldham County, the tenacity of 400 meter runner Cody Oldham was evident as he confidently won the 400 meter run and anchored the boys 4x400 meter relay to deliver a come-from-behind-victory with teammates Kyle Harmon, Josh Corral and Braxton Hall.

Oldham, trailing nearly 15 meters behind Floyd Central's Seth Jenkins at the exchange, found the speed and strength to power past Jenkins in the last 50 meters of the race to claim first.

Oldham County also received a first place finish by Zac Gnadinger in the triple jump, and placed second in the 4x100 meter relay just behind Trinity and second in the 4x800 meter relay.

North Oldham was led by the performances of Cameron Renaud in the shot put and Taylor Sanders in the 3200 meter run. Sanders won the 3200 meter race by more than 13 seconds and Renaud bested his nearest competitor by a foot.

Jake Evans placed second for North Oldham in the 400 meter run. South Oldham's Mike Thompson placed second in the high jump and fourth in the fastest sprint of the meet, the boys 100 meter dash.

THE OLDHAM ERA AND THE OLDHAM COUNTY HISTORY CENTER PRESENT MAY'S LIVING TREASURE Fred Balke

Top, Fred Balke during his service in the U.S. Navy. The photo appears in a book, "U. S. Navy: 71st Battalion," produced by members of the battalion. Above, Balke photographed at his home in Crestwood.

*Interviewed by Oldham County History Center executive director Nancy Theiss.
Photos by Peter Campbell and Bobbi Nelson and submitted by Balke.*

Fred Balke was born Aug. 20, 1922, to William and Catherine Balke.

His father was a construction worker and superintendent for the Highland Construction Company on Baxter Avenue.

The Balkes lived in Camp Taylor, a former U.S. Army camp during World War II that later became a neighborhood.

Balke's parents bought their home in 1924 and paid $4,000. They had a sewer line and water lines already installed by the U.S. Army.

Fred had two sisters, Evelyn and Dorothy Terhune, who are now deceased.

As a youngster, Fred remembers many truck gardens – gardens raised for the purpose of selling produce – during the Depression.

"I used to weed crops at the truck gardens to get a little spending money so I could go to the movies."

He was 10 or 12 when he started working, and was driving mules to plow by age 14.

"Most everyone had mules around and Mr. Hodel had a blacksmith shop and I would help him too."

Balke's dad had a 1925 Chevrolet and later a 1932.

"I was driving by the time I was 12 years old."

Across the road from Fred's home were 17 acres that belonged to the government.

Balke and friends built a ballpark there for summer recreation.

"We had some bleachers and would watch the Camp Taylor men's baseball team play."

When he wasn't playing baseball as a youngster, he liked to fish and hunt.

"I hunted rabbits mostly. I had an air rifle and later on my mother bought me a double-barrel shotgun."

"There were a lot of vacant lots and open spaces. I could walk away from Camp Taylor four or five blocks and be out in the country then."

"Poplar Level Road was the closest road to us, it was paved and started at Eastern Parkway and ended up at old Shelbyville Road. We were high and dry during the 1937 flood ... one of my mother's brothers had to come out and stay with us a few days."

"I went to Camp Taylor school as a little boy and then went to Okolona High School."

"We caught a bus out to Okolona High School. Down Preston Street they had a street car that came out to Coke Station. That was still five miles from our house but there was a bus line that came out by the house that took you to Third and Liberty in Louisville. From there you had to take a streetcar other places."

"We didn't go downtown too much. Dad worked six days a week. We had a garden, couple of milk cows and plenty of butter and milk. We raised chickens for eggs and ate them sometimes."

"People back then looked out for one another, more friendly I think. All the neighbors were checking on each other, asking for help."

"I think people were happier then even though they didn't have any money."

"We had a short wave system on the radio. That was my pastime at night. You could get stations from all over the world. The first radio was down the street."

"I was little, I was probably around 6 and then Dad got a radio for us. We listened to 'Amos and Andy' and Dad loved to listen to Joe Lewis and his boxing matches."

"I played soccer in high school, it was in gym class. Mr. Knight was our principal. Fern Creek was our biggest rival."

"I dated one girl for a while in high school but she lived on the other side of Okolona which was far away and we didn't have transportation so it didn't last too long!"

Balke's family – German on both sides – settled in Louisville.

His great-grandfather came from Germany through New Orleans, up river to St. Louis and met a girl from Germany in St. Louis and they married and came to Louisville.

"His brother came with them and they had a foundry on Adams Street. My grandfather then went into the construction business and construction has been in my family since."

"My grandfather, with mules, dug the basement at the Capital in Frankfort and he built Bardstown Road with mules. He plowed his truck garden with mules. He had the world's largest onion patch."

"He had 70 acres of onions and my grandfather was declared Onion King in Louisville and won a trip to the World's Fair in St. Louis in 1904!"

"His onion patch was out Bardstown Road near Taylorsville Road. The streetcar came out there so far and then they hooked mules up to pull the car when the electricity lines ran out."

"My mother's maiden name was Stickler. Our families would get together on Fourth of July picnics and different occasions. My dad had home brew and would cool it down for get-togethers."

"My job was to cap the bottles."

"He made a lot of wine too. I used to climb wild cherry trees and he would put tarpaulins on the ground and I would shake the wild cherries on the tarps."

"He made blackberry, wild cherry and dandelion wine."

"You make the dandelion wine from the taproots. He also used peaches and plums from our trees for wine."

"It was good – we always had a lot of company. He said as long as we had a lot of wine, there was a lot of people, but run out of wine and run out of people!"

"I didn't graduate from high school. I quit my second year in high school."

"I quit because of money and went to work with Highland Construction Company."

"We had a garden, couple of milk cows and plenty of butter and milk. We raised chickens for eggs and ate them sometimes."

"People back then looked out for one another, more friendly I think. All the neighbors were checking on each other, asking for help. I think people were happier then even though they didn't have any money."

"My mother was sick quite a bit and Dad made good money but it didn't go that far."

"Ft. Knox started building up then, so I went down to Ft. Knox."

"I stayed at home and there were six of us that drove out to Ft. Knox. It took about an hour and a half to get there."

"We finished Ft. Knox and then Highland Construction got a job at Richmond at the Bluegrass Ordinance Plant."

Balke and his wife moved to Richmond to be closer to the plant."

He Lavaun 'Bonnie' Smith on his 19th birthday.

They met during a blind date at Fontaine Ferry Park.

"We met in January and got married in August. We have been married for 70 years and have a son.

"We used to go to Fontaine Ferry a lot when I was growing up – the thing I remember most was Hilarity Hall. Church used to take us there with the youth group on trips.

"It was about that time, after I got married, the draft was getting close and I decided to join the Navy Seabees and do something that I already knew how to do."

"We got Marine training, six weeks at Camp Perry and then got advanced training at Davisville, R.I. Went to California, loaded up the ship and went to Guadalcanal (U. S. Navy: 71st Battalion).

Balke was a bulldozer operator.

"We stayed at Guadalcanal and did some work there but mainly got acclimated to the climate – humidity and heat.

"Then we got shipped out to Bougainville.

"Guadalcanal is the southernmost Solomon Island and Bougainville is the northernmost island. We were in the invasion and stationed there for five months.

"The Japanese were holding the biggest part of the island. We built the airfield and were under fire the whole time. ...

"We stayed in foxholes all night long to avoid getting shot.

"During the day, when they started shelling us, we jumped in a ditch.

"Our commander told us if we got the airfield built it would stop the air raids. We got the airfield built and we sent in a P-38, with radar controlled guns and shot down three Japanese planes in one night!

"The Japanese had one gun in a big cave. They would roll it out, fire four or five rounds then roll it back it. We could see the direction where the rounds were coming from but could never target the gun.

"There was a group of Fiji Island soldiers and with knives could cut their way through the jungle. They didn't even carry guns.

They got those guys and with two marines, cut their way through the jungle and got up with explosives and blew up the gun in the cave.

"... After that we went back

Guadalcanal and regrouped then they sent us to the Admiralty Islands.

"We built airfields and roads and a big lake for water supply. It was a major place for the Navy to jump off from for their mission to the Philippines. We worked hard there but wasn't under fire like in Bougainville.

"I got a lot of experience in the Seabees. I would do the same thing over again (enlist for the Seabees). I learned how to run dragline and back-hoes and a lot of heavy equipment. For the airfields we laid metal pierced plank. The planks were strips of metal with holes that would slide together and lock.

"One of the bad things about the plank is it would warm up and the sand would come up and plank would sink. We would have to use a crane to pick up the plank and work the sand back down.

"The worst job I had was unloading the cement off the ship. There was a crane on the ship for unloading the cement and no one could operate it but me.

"They sent me out there on that crane for 10 hours and I was getting tired because you had to lean over to operate it.

"Another guy came to relieve me and he couldn't do it. So they called me back and I had to operate it for 19 hours.

"We went back to Guadalcanal and then were shipped to Okinawa.

"We built mostly roads there. There was a lot of snipers. One of the guys I was working with got shot in the back.

"The Japanese would send all of these suicide planes in. The sky was lit up with tracers. It was like Thunder Over Louisville.

"I would work through it sometimes – the bulldozer had a metal hood over it.

"My job was to unload the landing ship tanks and pull heavy artillery to shore.

In Okinawa the LSTs couldn't get up on the beach because there was a coral reef that went out two or three feet then it dropped off.

"So we had to pull them through the water and everyone had to wade up to the shore but later one we got a better place for an invasion.

"I came home for a 30-day leave and then they dropped the bomb.

"After the war my wife and I stayed with my parents and I worked construction with Highland and then hauled furniture for Willet Furniture Company.

"Later I went back at Highland Construction and then Ambrose and ended up at Shamrock Construction for a while. We did concrete work all over Kentucky, including for inter-states.

"The whole time I wanted to buy a farm because I wanted a garden. I found this farm in Oldham County that we still live on today. That was in 1964.

"I raised beef cattle and tobacco and was working for Shamrock Corporation during that time. I ended up equipment superintendent and retired when I was 62.

"I joined the Masons in Pewee Valley Lodge 829 in 1977 and took third degree. My grandfather and my uncle were Masons and some of the guys I work with are Masons."

Balke will be 90 this year.

"I grow onions in my garden – red, yellow and white. There used to be a lot of potato growers out here. St. Mathews had a potato festival and there was a large shed to store potatoes in Worthington.

"I grow everything – I got beets and onions out there now. I raise heirloom tomatoes; they are called strawberry tomatoes – all meat, very little seed.

"I also like to fish- I fish with Dallas Stayton, my neighbor. We go to Taylorsville Lake and sometime the Ohio River.

"We fish for catfish and bass. The best bait is a catalpa worm.

"Around June or July you take a cane pole and hit the leaves and the worms fall to the ground. You pick them up and freeze them.

"We jug fish. You are allowed 50 jugs per boat, throw them out and go back and forth when you see a jug bouncing up and down.

"You are not allowed to leave them overnight with hooks on like that. Last year we caught a 16-pound catfish at Taylorsville Lake. We cut him up and ate him!

"I joined the Antique Iron Club at the history center because Gene Crady got me involved. I like to work on old machines. I rebuilt a Cub International tractor for Kurt Vesner and pulled an old tractor out of the ground and gave it to my pastor who has a farm up in Henry County.

"I go to some of the tractor shows with Gene – he is a go-getter. My wife and I go to Harrods Creek Baptist Church, been going there for years. I was a deacon there.

"There is a new bulletin board out there that has the history on the church. I had the bulletin board built.

"I went over to Carl Parrish at the prison and took the materials and they built it for us. That church goes back to the early 1800s and there was another old log church before that!

"I think I inherited my longevity from my grandmother. She and I were good buddies.

"I guess my father influenced me the most – I worked with him in construction work. He had two sides – if you got him bad he could get mad quick but then get over it . He'd give you a hug and $10.

"He died in 1946. He loved my wife too – she lived with me parents when I was in the service.

"My only regret is that I wish I had bought more land out here! But we get by fine and live a good life."

Fasting teaches power of Jesus

Over these last few weeks I have been writing about some spiritual disciplines, and this week's discipline is probably the simplest to understand, though a very hard one to follow: fasting.

Jesus clearly fasted, but warned about the hypocritical aspects of fasting. He said in Matthew 6:16-18, "When you fast, do not look somber as the hypocrites do, for they disfigure their faces to show men they are fasting...But put oil on your head and wash your face, so that it will not be obvious to men that you are fasting..."

Think for a moment about taking communion.

We eat only a piece of bread and a cup of juice or wine. How can such a spiritual meal have significance to us when we are always able to eat our fill?

Can we fully understand what a fantastic gift the bread of life is, the body of Christ, when we have never had to live on bread alone? The cup, one swallow and it is gone.

Do we understand how the blood of Christ revealed forgiveness for us and the world? In a world where all our desires can be met, do we understand making a voluntary sacrifice?

AL EARLEY
From a Religious Point of View

Fasting is the spiritual discipline that teaches us the power of Jesus and his sacrifice on the cross.

When we choose to deny ourselves a simple pleasure, we begin to appreciate the power of Jesus' sacrifice.

And Jesus gave it all for each of us.

"Greater love hath no man that he lay his life down for another" (John 15:13).

Fasting is an odd discipline. There is no million-dollar industry and no way to exploit it, like some of the other disciplines, where we can buy books, tapes, and go to conferences on prayer, worship and evangelism.

Fasting usually means to deny yourself of some or most foods, or to only eat certain foods. It can also include other sacrifices, like media or the internet.

Can you imagine how much more time you would have to pray to God and spend time with your family if you didn't watch any television for a whole week?

That may be a life-changing fast. It might have such an impact that you might try some kind of food fast.

The most common fast that I use is what I call a juice and tea fast. I deny myself all solid foods, and only drink fruit and vegetable beverages and different teas.

Fasting should be done in close connection with prayer. Along with learning about sacrifice, people who fast find it is a time when they get closer to God.

That is why the words "fasting and prayer" go so well together.

Sometimes, God will reveal when to end your fast, but cannot do so as easily if you are not praying.

In a discussion about fasting, a friend said he had started what he thought would be a 40-day fast, but the Lord had released him from the fast after five days.

You may start a fast for a shorter period and find the Lord wants you to keep fasting.

This is what happened to me as I started a three-day fast, and God made it clear that he wanted me to fast for 17 days. It was a spiritually rewarding time in my life when God prepared me to come to La Grange.

The benefits to fasting are tremendous.

Fasting is a discipline that those seeking greater faith maturity will find very rewarding.

The sense of God's presence, and God's ability to speak to us is greatly enhanced when we have deprived ourselves of something we don't have to give up. Our souls gain strength from God by exercising the difficult self-discipline fasting requires.

We better understand the great sacrifice Jesus Christ made for us when we make a small sacrifice for him.

Remember, he prepared for his ministry in the wilderness by fasting, so he would have the power to overcome the devil when tempted.

If you have not fasted in awhile or have never fasted, consider that your reading this article may be a way God is calling you to consider this powerful spiritual discipline as a Christian living in the land of plenty!
